Helly Hansen Rider Vest Buoyancy Aid - Ebony, 70 to 90 Kg

£41.49 4.7★

The closest alternative is the Helly Hansen Rider Vest Buoyancy Aid - Ebony, 60 to 70 Kg. It's essentially the same buoyancy aid, just sized for a lighter user, and it carries the same £41.49 price and 4.7★ rating. What's better is the match in design and quality if the fit suits you; what's worse is that it won't be right if you're in the 70 to 90 kg bracket, because buoyancy aids should be sized properly for safety and comfort. Choose this only if your weight falls into that lower range or you're buying for a smaller paddler.

The AKASO EK7000 Pro 4K Action Camera is not a direct substitute for a buoyancy aid, but it's an alternative if you were really looking for kit to capture your sessions rather than stay afloat. It's cheaper than many premium action cams at £56.99 and has a solid 4.4★ rating, plus touchscreen control and a waterproof housing. What's better is the ability to film your SUP runs, sailing trips, or surf sessions around the UK coast; what's worse is that it offers no safety value as flotation equipment. Pick this if your real priority is recording the action, not replacing a vest.

The Osprey Men's Osp M Origin Shorty Wetsuit is a better alternative if you need warmth and freedom of movement for summer sessions. At £39.99, it's slightly cheaper than the Helly Hansen vest and also rated 4.4★. What's better is that it helps in chilly UK spring and summer water, especially for kayaking, paddleboarding, and open-water swims where wind chill bites; what's worse is that it does not replace buoyancy aid protection. Go for this if you already have flotation sorted and want a bit more thermal comfort.

The AKASO EK7000 4K30FPS Action Camera with 64GB card is another non-buoyancy option, but it's useful for people building a watersports setup around content creation. At £56.98 with a 4.4★ rating, it includes memory card storage and a wide-angle lens, which is handy for long days on the water. What's better is the ready-to-use bundle; what's worse is the same obvious issue: it won't keep you afloat. This suits riders, surfers, and sailors who want an affordable waterproof camera rather than safety gear.

The Osprey Men's Osp Lng 5mm Full Length Wetsuit is the most expensive option here at £84.99, but it's the best pick if you're heading out in colder UK waters. The 5 mm thickness gives much better insulation than a vest, and the 4.2★ rating suggests it's a decent mid-range cold-water suit. What's better is the warmth for autumn and winter sessions on exposed coasts, lakes, and estuaries; what's worse is the price and reduced flexibility compared with lighter kit. Choose this if you need proper thermal protection for colder months rather than a buoyancy aid alone.

Still Buy the Original If...

The original Helly Hansen Rider Vest 70 to 90 Kg is still the best choice if you want a proven, well-rated buoyancy aid in the correct size at a fair price. If you're paddling, sailing, or boating in UK waters and need dependable flotation, it's the most relevant option here.
